WASHINGTON, D.C., (April 22, 2003) – Association for Healthcare Philanthropy (AHP) President/Chief Executive Officer William C. McGinly, Ph.D., CAE, today announced the employment of Terence J. Rainey as AHP executive vice president.

"AHP's membership has long benefited from the expertise and excellence of the Association's staff. The addition of Rainey to our team will enhance our effectiveness in disseminating AHP's message and influencing key decision makers on the profession's behalf," McGinly said. "Rainey's association background will allow AHP to obtain the full benefit of his knowledge and advance our members efforts in health care philanthropy."

Rainey joins AHP with 18 years of association experience. Rainey offers leadership and management experience in program development, education and training, IT, meetings, publications and fulfillment management, advocacy and financial management. Before joining AHP, Rainey was vice president for operations at the American Public Communications Council.
